

To Whom It May Concern:

I have had the pleasure of hunting with Safaris Chelet in their Alibori camp (Benin) and am currently putting together a group to hunt with Safaris Chelet in their Ngoko camp (Cameroon) based on the excellent experience I had hunting with them on our first safari to Benin.

My hunting partner in Benin was my eighteen year old daughter and Alibori Safaris took excellent care of both of us. Their camp was very clean and well appointed, adding to their excellent staff who took wonderful care of us. Dinner was always something we looked forward to. Jose' Chelet and" Pepe "have always been delightfull and highly competent. This time in camp was no different. Joaquin (Ximo) was our PH and he could not have taken better care of us. For such a young professional hunter his skills and attention to detail are exceptional. He knows every inch of the concession and where we were most likely to find the specific species we were looking for. Joaquin was enthusiastic, very knowledgeable, energetic and a joy to hunt with!

One of the things that most impressed me was Ximo's relationship with the local villagers and his camp staff. All of the staff obviously had a great deal of respect for him and he clearly felt the same way about his staff. He was obviously well know and liked in the small villages close to the concession which added to our comfort and great experience.

Based on our safari and experience I would strongly recommend Alibori Safaris in Benin and Ngoko Safaris in Cameroon to my hunting associates and in fact have already sent them some of my friends and will continue to refer clients to the Chelets. The decision to book a hunt with Ngoko in Cameroon was based on our excellent safari with their operation in Benin and an easy one make. Also, as a result of my membership in Safari Club International, I know a number of prominent International hunters that have hunted with the Chelets in Benin and or Cameroon and all highly recommend both camps.

Sincerely,
